Tired of getting blasted by the trucks on the highway?

Ideas that help overcome this issue

The truck drivers point of view is that they are as afraid of us hitting them as we are of them hitting us. That is why they put the pedal to the metal as they try to pass us. If I drive my coach 10 MPH slower than the truck, the blasting effect lasts a few seconds.

If I chose to obey the speed limit and drive 70 plus MPH, The effect seems to last more than a minute causing the coach to get pushed to the right and the pulled to the left.
